In the second half of each year, many powerful storms are born in the tropical Atlantic and Caribbean seas. Of these, only about half a dozen become the strong, circling winds of 74 miles per hour or more that are called hurricanes, and several usually make their way to the coast. There they cause millions of dollars of damage, and bring death to large numbers of people.

The great storms that hit the coast start soft circling wind hundreds - even thousands – of miles out to sea. As they travel aimlessly over water warmed by the summer sun, they are carried to move westward by the southeast winds. As the heat increases, the young hurricane beg counter-clockwise motion.

The life of a hurricane is only about nine days, but it contains almost more power than we can imagine. The energy in the heat released by a hurricane's rainfall in a single day would satisfy the entire electrical needs of the United States for more than six months. Water, not wind, is the main source of death and destruction in a hurricane. A typical hurricane brings 6 to 12 inches downpour, causing sudden floods. Worst of all is the powerful movement of the sea – the mountains of water moving toward the hurricane center. The water level rises as much as 15 feet above normal as it moves toward shore.

Smokejumpers are a special type of firefighters. They jump from planes into areas that are difficult to reach by car or on foot, like the middle of a mountain forest. They race to put out fires as fast as they can at the fire site. Their main goal is to stop a fire from spreading. Using basic equipment such as shovels and axes, smokejumpers clear land and burnable materials like plants and other dry materials. They carry water with them too but only a limited amount. Although the majority of smokejumpers are man, more women are joining. Most important are your height and your weight. Smokejumpers employed in the U.S, for example must be 120 and 200 pounds (54 to 91kg), so they don't get any hurt when they land, or get blown by strong winds. Smokejumpers must also be capable to surviving in the wilderness.

In Russia, many smokejumpers knew how to find food in the forest and even make simple furniture from trees. The work is dangerous, and the hours are long, but for these firefighters smokejumpers isn't just an occupation. They love being able to jump out of planes fight fires, and live in the forest. As 28-years old Russian smokejumpers Alexi says "this is the best job for tough guys".
